KASHMIR KNOWS HIM AS YUS ASSAF

On Christ's Second Coming Pastor Dan Jarrard says: After the revival I asked the young man if he would like to give his life to Christ. To my horror he responded. No thank you. There's no hurry. According to what you preached this week, if Jesus comes tonight I'll have time to get right during the 7-year tribulation period. I want to have fun while I can, while driving home the next day, with his words pounding in my mind - I pledged to reinvestigate The Second Coming Of Christ. This series is what I discovered from God's Word: For the Lord himself will descend from heaven with a cry of command, with the voice of an archangel, and with the sound of the trumpet of God. And the dead in Christ will rise first. Then we who are alive, who are left, will be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so we will always be with the Lord. (Thessalonians 4:16-17)

The second coming of Jesus Christ pbuH is believed both by Christians and Muslims and eschatological resurrection theory has a huge significance and is basic to the belief of Christian faith. Roza Bal Srinagar Kashmir burial site of Jesus Christ pbuH as believed, can be a lot controversial and will be debated for a long time in future.

In these BBC videos Richard Denton explains how this mighty Messenger Jesus pbuH travelled to Kashmir giving some historical background and analysis.

JESUS TOMB SRINAGAR, KASHMIR

Rozabal Srinagar Kashmir, attracts hundreds of curious tourists every day. The single storey structure houses two graves one thought to be of Jesus Christ (peace be upon Him) and the other of Syed Naseer-ud-din a Sufi Saint. In the recent past, Christian historians from the west also claim this to be the resting place for this mighty Messenger of God and in this connection are trying to persuade people of the area and authorities to exhume the remains for carbon dating or DNA testing. This being a sensitive religious issue, the local population has certain reservations but testing the remains might be a possibility sometime in future. It is noteworthy that Sufi saint's grave is facing the East being the Muslim burial tradition but the other grave thought to be of Jesus Christ faces towards West, believed to be a Jewish tradition.

Richard Denton of BBC believes that Jesus (peace be upon Him) survived the cross and escaped to Kashmir. On the cross, he went into a shock induced coma and probably He was presumed dead. The miraculous resurrection theory, he believes, was a mistake. It is also believed, Jesus pbuH had already been to India during years between 12 and 29 and learned Buddha teachings and brought it back. He returned to India after crucifixion and carried on the Ministry in Kashmir until he died at the age of 80. Richard Denton also is believed to quote some evidence of His visit to India by referring to Hindu scriptures. So this mighty Messenger of God is believed to be buried in the capital city of Srinagar and that is where he went to fulfil His God's mission.

CROSS REPLACED WITH HANUMAN IDOL

In India such things happen frequently without any notice and most of the times never reported in the electronic media gets a place somewhere on the middle page right or left corner in the print media. An under-construction church in Kaimri village near here was vandalised by a group and the cross replaced with an idol of Hanuman, triggering tension in the area in Haryana.

CHURCH VANDALISED IN INDIA'S HARYANA

Father Subhash Chand of Williwarsch church lodged a complaint against 14 people, following which a case was registered by police under sections 147 (Punishment for rioting), 153A (promoting enmity between groups), 295 (destroying, damaging a place of worship with intent to insult the religion of any class of persons), 380 (theft in a building), 506 (criminal intimidation) of IPC.

The complainant stated that the accused fragmented the cross and installed the statue of Hanuman and a flag depicting Lord Ram and threatened to kill him. He alleged that they stole a cooler and some items from the worship place that was under construction. Hisar range Deputy Inspector General (DIG) Saurabh Singh said that the situation was under control. Meanwhile, Christian Front Haryana has condemned the incident and has demanded immediate arrest of the accused, all residents of Kaimri.

THE FACTUALITY

The Roza Bal little known in Kashmir assumed some prominence when the founder of Ahmadiya Community, Mirza Ghulam Ahmed claimed (1899) the shrine to be the tomb of Jesus Christ pbuH. The majority Muslim population of Kashmir, however, believe that the theory that Jesus pbuH is buried anywhere on the face of earth to be a figment of imagination and consider it blasphemous to Islam. Muslims believe that Jesus pbuH was raised to heavens by the will of God as Islam describes Jesus pbuH as the spirit of God ordained to come back to the world to declare and confirm sovereignty of God over all worlds.

Everything evil, bad and sinister that happens in the world these days is intriguingly pinned on religion rather than the people who control it. To fulfil respective agendas; the powers who thrive on promoting materialism, liberalism, secularism or any other way of life, in the name of freedom, are doing more harm than any good to the society as a whole. The silent majority world over helplessly watches the deteriorating situation especially when the security of the world is put at stake. Only time can tell what is in store for us and all must keep the fingers crossed.

WHAT ISLAM SAYS ABOUT JESUS CHRIST pbuH?

Jesus Christ (Peace be upon Him), a Messenger of peace, his role in the past and the role He is to play in future. No Muslim is a Muslim if he or she does not believe in

Jesus Christ pbuH to have born miraculously without any male intervention and the miracles he performed by the permission of Allah almighty, curing people's illness, causing the lame to walk and even the resurrection of dead back to life. The story of Lazarus

That they said (in boast), We killed Christ Jesus the son of Mary, the Messenger of God.:- but they killed him not, nor crucified him, but so it was made to appear to them, and those who differ therein are full of doubts, with no (certain) knowledge, but only conjecture to follow, for of a surety they killed him not. Holy Quran

Nowhere in Bible explicitly has Jesus Christ declared that he is the Son of God but it is understood by Christians implicitly. Jesus Christ himself stated he did NOT come to abolish the Law, but to FULFILL it! In other words He came to fulfil the laws of Moses and other Prophets. Muslims also believe that the message Jesus Christ pbuH conveyed was meant, like all other Prophets before Him, for people of that time. The message with the passage of time was corrupted, changed and interpolated and finally Allah sent the last and final messenger Muhammad pbuH, not only for Muslims but for the whole mankind.

Prophet Muhammad pbuH, taught Muslims to believe that Allah raised Jesus Christ pbuH to Him and Jesus Christ pbuH, will return in His second coming to testify the message, He conveyed to the people.

MATTHEW 21:12-13

Jesus entered the temple courts and drove out all who were buying and selling there. He overturned the tables of the money changers and the benches of those selling doves. It is written, he said to them, My house will be called a house of prayer, but you are making it a den of robbers

TOURISTS FLOCK TO 'JESUS' TOMB' IN KASHMIR by Sam Miller Srinagar

Jesus is reputed to be buried in this run-down shrine in the Kashmir capital. A belief that Jesus survived the crucifixion and spent his remaining years in Kashmir has led to a run-down shrine in Srinagar making it firmly onto the must-visit-in India tourist trail. In the backstreets of downtown Srinagar is an old building known as the Rozabal shrine. It's in a part of the city where the Indian security forces are on regular patrol, or peering out from behind check-posts made of sandbags.

There are still occasional clashes with militants or stone-throwing children, but the security situation has improved in recent times and the tourists are returning.

When I first searched for Rozabal two years ago, the taxi circled around a minor Muslim tomb in a city of many mosques and mausoleums, the driver asking directions several times before we found it. The shrine, on a street corner, is a modest stone building with a traditional Kashmiri multi-tiered sloping roof. A watchman led me in and encouraged me to inspect the smaller wooden chamber within, with its trellis-like, perforated screen.

Through the gaps I could see a gravestone covered with a green cloth. When I returned to the shrine recently though, it was shut - its gate padlocked because it had attracted too many visitors. The reason - Well, according to an eclectic combination of New Age Christians, unorthodox Muslims and fans of the Da Vinci Code, the grave contains the mortal remains of a candidate for the most important visitor of all time to India.

CRAZY PROFESSOR

Officially, the tomb is the burial site of Youza Asaph, a medieval Muslim preacher - but a growing number of people believe that it is in fact the tomb of Jesus of Nazareth. They believe that Jesus survived the crucifixion almost 2,000 years ago, and went to live out his days in Kashmir.

"What else could they do? They had to close it," Riaz told me.

His family home almost overlooks the shrine, and he is witheringly dismissive of the notion that Jesus was buried there. "It's a story spread by local shopkeepers, just because some crazy professor said it was Jesus's tomb. They thought it would be good for business. Tourists would come, after all these years of violence.

"And then it got into the Lonely Planet, and too many people started coming.

"And one foreigner..." he gave me an apologetic look, "broke off a bit from the tomb to take home with him. So that's why it's closed now." On cue, a couple of unwashed and exhausted Australians appeared, carrying the latest edition of the Lonely Planet travel guide to India, which, sure enough, carried the tale of Jesus's tomb, with some caveats about crackpots and blasphemy.

They asked me to take a photo of them outside the shrine - but were not desperately disappointed that it was closed. The tomb of Jesus was just another place to tick off on their tourist-in-India must-visit list.

FAMOUS MEETING

The remains of a Buddhist monastery which some believe Jesus visited.

The ruins of a Buddhist monastery in a spectacular location halfway up a mountainside north of Srinagar are not, yet, mentioned in the Lonely Planet. It's a spot that I had previously been unable to visit, because as a senior police officer told me, it was "infested with terrorists". But the watchman now seemed prepared for the arrival of mass tourism, with his 50 words of English, and his hidden stock of ancient terracotta tiles for sale.

He informed me that Jesus was among the religious leaders who attended a famous Buddhist meeting here in AD80, and even pointed to the place where he sat. The stories of Jesus in India are not just aimed at gullible tourists - they date back to the 19th Century. They were part of attempts to explain the striking similarities between Christianity and Buddhism, a matter of great concern to 19th Century scholars - and also a desire among some Christians to root the story of Jesus in Indian soil.

MISSING YEARS

Christians form a little more than 2% of India's population

There is talk of the missing years of Jesus, unmentioned in the gospels, when he was between the ages of 12 and 30. Some say he was in India, picking up Buddhist ideas. These aren't notions that have entirely died out. The US-based Christian sect, known as the Church Universal and Triumphant, is the best-known modern supporter of the belief that Jesus lived in Kashmir, though they don't believe he died there.

And in Islam, in which Jesus is the penultimate prophet, there is also a minority tradition adopted by the controversial Ahmadiyya sect, that Rozabal does contain the grave of Jesus. Professional historians tend to laugh out loud when you mention the notion that Jesus might have lived in Kashmir - but his tomb is now firmly on the tourist trail - and a growing number of credulous visitors believe that he was buried in the Rozabal shrine.

And for those who scoff, remember that others have argued, just as implausibly, that Jesus came to Britain. A theory that was much in vogue when the poet William Blake famously asked: "And did those feet in ancient time, walk upon England's mountains green? And was the holy Lamb of God on England's pleasant pastures seen?"

AMEER TARIN WRITES

Jesus Christ known to some as God, to others Son of God and to many more out there as a Prophet of God. And an increasing number of people, though suitably and conveniently enjoying Christmas Holidays, refuse to accept the spiritual and divine aspect of this mighty phenomenon living in the hearts and minds of millions of believers. Apostates, atheists or unbelievers with due respect to their individual beliefs, as suggested, must give Christmas holidays a suitable different name as that would be appropriate.
